-ful<sup>2</sup> ful suffix repr. the adj. FULL and forming sbs. denoting a receptacle filled with a substance, and hence the quantity that fills or would fill it. There are a few exx. in OE., the chief of which is HANDFUL (cf. Du. handvol, G. handvoll). The suffix soon became of universal application and the number of its comps., permanent or temporary, is limited only by the number of appropriate sbs. OE. handfull was treated as a word, not as a syntactical combination, e.g. its d. pl. is handfullum. The present pl. is therefore properly handfuls, not handful (as some have illogically supposed). Note the unobserved u of this suffix as dist. from -FUL<sup>1</sup>. ¶ The following are of different origin, being direct comps. of the adj. full: bankful(l) full to the top of the bank, brimful full to the brim (which was preceded by synon. OE. brerdful), †topful.

The L. vbs. fall into three classes according to the force of the suffix, viz. (i) 'make', 'convert into something', as œdificāre EDIFY, deificāre DEIFY, pacificāre PACIFY, testificāre TESTIFY, (ii) 'bring into a certain state', as certificāre (late) CERTIFY, modificāre MODIFY, sanctificāre SANCTIFY (OF. saintesfier), (iii) with causative sense, as horrificāre HORRIFY. In medL. -ficāre was substituted for -facere, so that F. and Eng. words in -fier, -fy often corr. to L. vbs. in -facere, e.g. satisfier SATISFY, stupéfier STUPEFY (but in pp. stupéfait, beside stupéfié). Except in these vbs. and calesfy, liquefy, putrefy, rarefy, rubefy, the suffix normally takes the form -IFY, which has been consequently generalized for new formations (e.g. codify c.1800, indemnify XVII) and has been freely used

(esp. for trivial and joc. coinages), with the senses: 'make a specified thing', as speechify; 'assimilate to the character of something', as countrify, fishify (chiefly in pp.); 'invest with certain attributes', as Frenchify, happify. An early ex. is beautify, but the analogy on which it is formed is not clear; crucify is a special case and argufy is unique.

The nouns of action corr. to vbs. in -ify end in -ification, exc. petrification, where F. has regularly pétrification; those corr. to vbs. in -efy end in -faction, as rarefaction, stupefaction.

-ic ik formerly also -ick, -ik(e), -ique, repr. (often through (O)F. -ique) L. -icus, as in civicus, civique CIVIC, domesticus DOMESTIC, publicus PUBLIC, or in adoptions from Gr., as in cōmicus, kōmikos COMIC, poēticus, poiētikos POETIC. The L. suffix became more widely used in late L. and Rom. in the comp. suffix -aticus (see -ATIC, -AGE). In chem., since 1796, depending on the use of F. -ique in 'Nomenclature Chimique' (1787), -ic has been spec. used to denote acids and other compounds having a higher degree of oxidation than those whose names end in -ous, e.g. sulphuric acid H<sub>2</sub>SO<sub>4</sub> (sulphurous acid H<sub>2</sub>SO<sub>3</sub>).

Derivative abstract sbs. end in -icity i·siti, as domesticity, publicity.

Gr. words in -ikos were used absol. as sbs. (i) in the m. sg., e.g. kritikos CRITIC, Stōikos 'man of the porch', STOIC; (ii) in the fem. sg., in names of arts, or systems of thought, knowledge, or action (scil. tékhnē, theōriā, philosophiā), e.g. hē mousikē MUSIC, hē ēthikē ETHIC; (iii) in the n. pl., e.g. tā oikonomikā things pert. to economy, ECONOMICS, tā politikā affairs of state, POLITICS. The distinction between fem. sg. and n. pl. tended to become obliterated, so that hē taktikē and tā taktikā, hē physikē and tā physikā were synonymous. Moreover, in pairs like physikē, physikā, both forms gave L. physica, which might be repr. by physic or physics, according as it was apprehended as fem. sg. or n.pl. Early adoptions in Eng. usu. with -ique, -ike, after F., were in the sg. form, which has survived in arithmetic, logic, magic, music, rhetoric. Later, forms in -ics (†-iques) occur as names of treatises, e.g. etiques, i.e. Aristotle's tā ēthikā, the Ethics; this form was then applied to the subject-matter of such treatises, as mathematics, physics, tactics, and finally became the accepted form with names of sciences, as acoustics, comics, linguistics, optics, or matters of practice, as athletics, gymnastics, politics. More recently the sg. form has been preferred by some, after F. or G. usage, e.g. dialectic, ethic, metaphysic. Names of sciences in -ics are now construed as sg., names of practical matters as pl., e.g. 'Mathematics is the science of quantity', 'A woman's politics are the man she loves'. There are also many sbs. formed from adjs. in -ic taken absol., as cosmetic, emetic, epic, lyric, iambic, domestic, rustic, classic. Words in -ic from Gr. or L. are regularly stressed on the penultimate syll. (which normally has a short vowel), as drama·tic, enclī·tic, fana·tic, mecha·nic, pole·mic, splene·tic; but in some older adoptions, mainly through French, like ari·thmetic, ca·tholic, he·retic, lu·natic, rhe·toric, the stress is on the antepenultimate. Pronunciation with a long penultimate is due to recent modelling on classical quantity, as in cretic, exegetic, strategic, and psychic, scenic; acetic is variously pronounced; nitric follows nitre.

-ical ikl comp. suffix consisting of -IC and -AL<sup>1</sup>, repr. (O)F. -ical(e), late L. -icālis, as in clērical, clēricālis, grammaticālis; the number of these was increased in medL., e.g. chirurgicālis SURGICAL, dominicālis, medicālis, mūsicālis, physicālis. While F. adjs. in -ical are not numerous, Eng. formations are abundant, and are very freq. earlier than corr. words in -IC. A distinction of application is often made where there are parallel forms, e.g. comic in 'comic opera', 'the comic muse', comical in 'comical attitude', economic in 'economic theory', economical in 'economical housekeeper', historic in 'historic speeches', historical in 'English Historical Review', optic in 'optic nerve', optical in 'optical illusion'. In many cases the main distinction is that one form is more usual than the other, as artistic, authentic, epic, idiotic, linguistic, sympathetic, but farical, oratorical, syntactical, theatrical, tropical. Derivative sbs. end in -ically ikæ·liti, and advs. in -ically ikæli, which serves also for adjs. in -ic, e.g. drastic | drastically, specific | specifically.

-ing<sup>1</sup> in suffix forming derivs. orig. of verbs, primarily nouns of action, but subsequently developed in application and meaning in various ways: OE. -ung and -ing (which superseded the more frequent -ung in early ME.) = OFris. -unge, -inge, -enge, OS. -unga, MLG., MDu. -inge, Du. -ing, OHG. -unga (G. -ung), ON. -ung, -ing (not known in Gothic and with no cogns. outside Germ.). In OE. the earliest and commonest use of the suffix is in formations from weak verbs, e.g. ācsung asking (f. ācsian ask), čiding, -ing rebuke (f. čidan blame, chide), feding (f. fēdan feed), leorning learning, study (f. leornian), macung (f. macian do, MAKE), sorgung (f. sorgian grieve). Extension to strong verbs began in OE., e.g. brecung breaking, eting eating, hlēapung leaping, writing; and before 1200 the suffix was used with verbs of any class, whether native or adopted. Formation on advs. by ellipsis of a verbal notion is typified by inning, offing, outing, (swan-)upping, homing. Nonce-words are freely formed on words and phrases of many kinds, e.g. oh-oh-ing, hear-hear-ing, hov-d'ye-doing, to-and-fro-ing.

In OE. itself was developed the notion of a completed action or process or the result of this, (whence) habit, art, e.g. blētsung, -ing blessing, benediction, gaderung collection, assembly, leorning learning, study, tiding tidings, wedding betrothal, wedding; transference to concrete or material accompaniment or product of a process followed, as in bedding bed-clothes, eardung dwelling, innung contents, revenue, (ge)mēting meeting, assembly, convention, offrung sacrifice, sčēawung spectacle, show; from trynman strengthen, confirm, array (TRIM), was formed trynning with the series of meanings 'strengthening', 'foundation', 'confirmation', 'edification', 'edifying matter'. Further extensions are: the addition of the suffix to the names of things used or dealt with, or the persons engaged in an action, e.g. blackberrying, fowling, gardening, hop-ping (hop-picking), nutting; buccaneering, soldiering; its use to designate a material thing in which the action or result is embodied, e.g. a writing on the wall, the covering of a chair, the landing of a staircase, a winding in a river; the collective designation of material used, e.g. carpeting, edging, sheeting, trimming, trouser. The existence of a parallel sb. of the same form as the verb (as in clothes/clothing, rail/railing) has led to the creation of -ing-forms without a corresponding verb, as coping, pip, scaffolding, tubing. Individualized use, with consequent pluralization, began early and became prominent in later periods, e.g. a long sitting, three sittings; a bad beginning but a happy ending; an outing, frequent outings. In some plurals the concr. use appears almost exclusively, e.g. earnings, filings, hangings, housings, innings, leavings, trappings. EVENING and MORNING are special formations.

b. The outstanding development of the verbal sb. in -ing is its use as a gerund, so that it may be qualified by adjs. and advs. and may take an object and a predicative noun or adj., e.g. the habit of rising early, engaged in building a house, you being strangers and so much alike; (with an object and predicated pp.) after having written a letter. The germ of such constructions may be seen in such OE. comps. as āpswerung swearing of oaths, feaxfallung falling-out of hair, mynter-clēnsung purification of a church, āfenwāding lecture in the evening, ūtspiwung exhortation, where the first el. is a sb. in subjective, objective, or adverbial relation, or an adverb, and in such constructions as oftrādlice rādunga hāligra bōca frequent readings of holy books (objective genitive). The attrib. use of the gerund, as in breeding place, counting house, dancing lesson, feeding ground, living room, mounting block, sinking fund, thanksgiving day, winning post, has its antecedent models in the earliest periods; e.g. OE. cemingstōw birthplace, huntingspere hunting-spear, writingfeber pen, ME. gretting word salutation (Orm); the variety of application already in OE. is illustrated by leorningčild pupil, -cniht disciple, -mann student, -craeft scholarship, -his school.

-ing<sup>2</sup> in suffix of the prp., ME. alteration of OE. -ende, later -inde, in late Nhb. -ande (after ON.) = OFris., OS. -and (Du. -end), OHG. -anti, -enti, -onti (G. -end), ON. -andi, Goth. -ands, corr. to L. -ant- -ANT, -ent- -ENT, Gr. -ont-, Skr. -ant-. The forms -inde, -ende continued in the Kentish area till XIV, but from the end of XII there was a general tendency to assim. -inde to -ing<sup>1</sup>, perh. partly through assoc. with AN., (O)F. -ant, which is the ending of both prps. and gerunds (-ant repr. both L. -antem, -entem and -andum, -endum). Several words of ppl. origin or nature are used only or mainly as adjs., e.g. cunning, daring, hulking, lumping, nonjuring, strapping, scingeing, topping, un-availing, willing; others (mostly of F. origin) are prepositions, viz. concerning, during, excepting, notwithstanding, pending, touching.

As a morphological feature the prp. enters into the formation of the tenses with the verb be, variously known as progressive, a continuous, indefinite: e.g. I am coming, 'They were fighting'; the use is found in the earliest OE.

-ing<sup>3</sup> in suffix forming masc. sbs. based on sbs. or adjs. with the sense 'one belonging to or of the kind of . . .', 'possessing the qualities of . . .', as a patronymic 'one descended from . . .'; OE. -ing (corr. to OHG. -ing, ON. -ingr, -ungr) as in: æþeling ATHELING, cýning KING, iermíng, earníng poor wretch, flýmíng fugitive, hóring whoremonger, lytling little one; patronymics, as Æþelwulfing/Wodening son of Æthelwulf/Woden; gentile names, as Centingas men of Kent, Réadingas (Reading), Gomorríngas people of Gomorra; names of coins, þending, þenning PENNY, scílling SHILLING; fractional parts, feorþing FARTHING, þrídíng RIDING (of ON. origin); ME. efeníng equal (Orm) is - ON. jafríngi. inter- i·ntər, intə·ɪ L. prep. (see prec.), repr. in F. by entre- (see ENTER-), used as a prefix with the senses: (1) between, in between, in the midst, as in intercalāre, -cēdere, -pōnere, -venire, whence INTERCALARY, INTERCEDE, INTERPOSE, INTERVENE, interdigitalis lying between the fingers, INTERREGNUM, intervallum INTERVAL; (2) at intervals, as in intermittere INTERMIT; (3) with preventive or destructive effect, as in intercipere INTERCEPT, interdicere (see INTERDICT), interficere kill (f. facere DO<sup>1</sup>). The earliest adoptions of such words in Eng. came through F. forms with entre- (e.g. entrechange, entrefere), but in XVI remodelling of these forms on the L. inter- began, and at the same time the use of the prefix was widely extended in combination with various radicals, and functioning as adj. or as adv. The other large group of comps. in which inter- has become a living formative is that in which it governs prepositionally (with the senses 'between', 'among', and 'forming a link between', 'belonging in common to') the sb. implied in the radical part of the comp., on the model of late L. interammus placed between rivers (ammis river), intermūrālis situated between walls (mūrus wall), as in many gen. and techn. words like intervalveolar, intercolonial, intercollegiate, interdenominational, interdental, international, interstellar, intervocalic. -ish<sup>1</sup> if suffix forming adjs.: OE. -isc = OFris., OS., OHG. -isc (Du., G. -isch), ON. -iskr, Goth. -isks = -Germ. **-iskaz* = Gr. dim. suffix -iskos; in some words reduced to -sh, with a var. -ch; in Sc. usu. -is, with reduced vars. -s, -ce. In OE., etc., words of old formation (mostly gentile names) have mutation; e.g. Englisc ENGLISH, Sc. †Inglis, Scyttisc, Sc. †Scottis, SCOTS (see SCOTTISH, SCOTCH), Wielisc WELSH, Sc. †Walys, †Wal-lis, Demisc, Sc. †Dense (see DANISH), Frencisc FRENCH, Grēcisc, †Greekish; similarly many adjs. of various dates and origins, as Irish (XIII), Flemish, Pictish, Swedish. Formations in OE. on common nouns are æorlisé, ðierlisé churlish, ældisé childish, hæþenisé heathen*ish*, ütlandisé foreign; their number was greatly increased in ME., at first with the uncoloured meaning of 'pert. to or of the nature of', but later chiefly on dyslogistic words, as boorish, foolish, shrewish, thievish, or with the derogatory force 'having the bad or unpleasant qualities of', as apish, babyish, monkish, popish, selfish, womanish, (with proper names) Miss Mortineauish (Tennyson), Micawberish, West-Endish, (with names of things) aguish, bookish, feverish, (with other parts of speech or phrases) pettish, snappish, stundoffish, ticklish, uppish, alloverish.

From XIV onwards -ish was added to adjs. with the sense 'approaching the quality of, somewhat, rather', first to adjs. of colour, as bluish, reddish, whitish (Trevisa), greenish (Ch.), but later to any (esp. monosyllabic) adjs., often with the intention of being neutral, as softish. This use has been extended in XX (prob. after earlyish, latish) to the qualification of hours of the day or numbers of years to denote 'roundabout', 'or thereabouts', as four-ish, 1940-ish. ¶ Endings of other origin have been assim. to -ish in garish, lavish, lickerish, peevish, squeamish.

-ish<sup>2</sup> if repr. F. -iss-, extension of the stem of vbs. in -ir, e.g. abolir ABOLISH, périr PERISH, prp. abolissant, périssant, 3rd pers. pl. pres. ind. abolissent, périssent; originating in the -isc- of L. inceptive vbs., the use of which in F., Pr., and It. was extended to form a class corr. to L. vbs. in -ire and -ere, together with some others that were assim. to these. The earliest forms in Eng. were -is, -ise, -iss(e), which were superseded by -ische, -ishe, -ish; in Sc. -is(se) remained to a later date and appeared in XVI as -eis(e). (In a few words F. -iss- is repr. by -ise or -ize, viz. advertise, aggrandize, chastise, amortize; ré-jour, réjouis- has given rejoice.) ¶ Other F. endings have been assim. to this suffix in admonish, astonish, diminish, distinguish, famish, lavish, minish, publish, relish.

isinglass ai'sɪŋɡləs gelatin obtained from air-bladder of sturgeon, etc., fish-glue. XVI (isomglas, ison-). With assim. to glass - early Du. †huysenblas, f. †huysen, †huys sturgeon + †blas (mod. blaas) bladder (cf. G. hausenblase).

XIX (Shelley). - Arab. islām, f. aslama he resigned himself (spec. to God), he became sincerely religious, 4th conjugation of salama he became or was safe. Cf. MOSLEM, SALAAM. So Islamism XVIII (F. islamisme, Voltaire), Islamite XVIII (F. islamite).

OE. iēg, iġ island, in comp. water, sea, OFris. ey island, OHG. ouwa water, stream, watery meadow, island, peninsula (G. aue, au brook, meadow, pasture), ON. ey island = Germ. **aujō* (repr. in medL. Austr[avia, Scadin]avia, OE. Scedenig, ON. Skáney, for **agwǫð*, adj. formation on **agwō-* stream, water (whence OE. ēa, OFris. ā, ē, OS., OHG. aha, ON. d, Goth. ahwa), rel. to L. aqua water (cf. AQUATIC). The present. sp., dating from XVI, is due to assim. to next.

isle ail (arch. exc. as in place names) island. XIII. ME. ile, later isle – OF. ile (mod. île), (latinized) †isle = Pr., Sp. isla, It. isola :- L. insula, expl. by the ancients as f. in salō 'in the salt sea', but superficial resemblance to Gr. nēsos, nāsos, and Ir. inís, W. ynys, may point to gen. adoption from some Mediterranean (non-IE.) source. So ISLET ai·lit small island. XVI. – OF. islette (mod. îlette).

-ism izm repr. F. -isme, L. -ismus – Gr. -ismós, forming nouns of action for vbs. in -izein -IZE, e.g. baptismós dipping, BAPTISM. (A rel. suffix -isma, which expresses rather the finished action, is sometimes the source of -ism; see CHARISMA.) A frequent use of -ismós was to express the sense of acting like or adopting the habits of a body of people, as Attikismós siding with Athenians, Attic fashion or idiom; so Ioudaismós Judaism, Khristianismós practice of Christians, Christianity; on this model was formed medL. pāgānismus PAGANISM, whence OF. païenisme, -ime (cf. PAYNIM). In Eng. Judaism is recorded in xv, and from XVI formations with the suffix become numerous. The chief uses are: (1) to form a noun of action naming the process, the completed action, or its result, e.g. baptism, criticism, exorcism, nepotism, ostracism; (2) with emphasis on conduct, habit, or character, e.g. barbarism, despotism, heroism, patriotism, blackguardism, priggism; (3) forming the name of a system of theory or practice, based on the name of its subject or object, or on the founder's or a promoter's name, e.g. Arianism, Catholicism, Epicureanism, positivism, ritualism, Romanism, Socinianism, and (by extension) to designations of doctrines or principles, e.g. agnosticism, altruism, bimetallicism, deism, egoism, egotism, hedonism, polytheism, romanticism, universalism; (4) forming a term denoting a trait or peculiarity, as of language, e.g. Americanism, Anglicism, Gallicism, Scottishism, colloquialism, after archaism, barbarism, Græcism, Hellenism, solecism; for (3) and (4) there is an extensive record of nonce-words. Adjectives of sbs. in -ism end in -ISTIC. Hence ISM izm form of theory or practice of a distinctive character, such as may be designated by a word in -ism. XVII ('Jesuitism, Puritanism, Quakerism, and all Isms from Schism', 1680). The suffix -ist has been similarly used as a sb.

Preceded in use by isolé (XVIII), which was occas. semi-naturalized as isolé d. Hence isolate vb. -ist ist repr. F. -iste, L. -ista, -tēs – Gr. -istēs, forming agent-nouns from vbs. in -izein -IZE, consisting of the agential suffix -tēs added to the vb.-stem, as in baptistēs BAPTIST. Several Gr. words were adopted into classical L. (e.g. citharista player on the cithara, grammatista grammarian, sophista, tympānista drummer), and many more by Christian writers (e.g. baptista, exorcista, psalmista); later it came into regular use for the designations of observers of particular tenets or rites or the followers of religious leaders (e.g. Catharista, Platonista, nōminālista, reālista). In Eng. and the mod. langs. the suffix forms not only agent-nouns having corr. verbs in -ize, but analogues of sbs. in -ism (e.g. altruism, -ist), and further, without such reference, names of followers of a leader or a school, of adherents of a party, and of devotees or practisers of a profession or art, e.g. Bonapartist, botanist, Chartist, copyist, cyclist, diarist, genealogist, nonconformist, philologist, royalist, socialist; its present wide use is typified by such words as artist, casuist, florist, Hebraist, humo(u)rist, journalist, materialist, novelist, Second Adventist, semi-finalist, tobaccoist, ventriloquist. Cf. -ISM.

-ister istəɹ repr. OF. -istre, by-form of -iste -IST (perh. after ministrer minister, etc.), as in evangelistre, beside evangeliste; so choristre (whence ME. †queristre, CHORISTER), sophistre SOPHISTER.

-istic i'stik repr. F. -istique, L. -isticus - Gr. -istikós, comp. suffix f. -istēs -IST+ -ikós -IC, as in sophistikós SOPHISTIC(AL); but used also where there is a CORR. VB. in -izein -IZE, and sb. in -ismós -ISM but not a sb. in -istēs -IST, as in kharaktēristikós CHARACTERISTIC. The use of this suffix was much extended in medL. and mod. langs., and supplies in Eng. the regular adjs. for forms in -IST, as well as for some in -ISM where no deriv. in -IST exists, as altruistic, Calvinistic, Hellenistic, realistic, socialistic. Some are used as sbs., e.g. characteristic, syllogistic(s). An alternative secondary form is -istical, whence the gen. adv. -istically<sup>2</sup>; there is also a parallel -isticate<sup>3</sup> for related vbs.; e.g. sophistic, -ical, -ically, -icate(d).

it neuter pron. of the 3rd pers. sg.; nom. and acc. of the orig. demonstrative stem **xi-*, whence also HE<sup>1</sup>, HIM, HIS, HER. OE. hit = OFris. hit, het, (M)Du. het it, Goth. hita this. (The parallel stem **i-* is the base of OS. it, OHG. iʒ, G. es it.) Loss of initial h (which is retained dial. for emphasis) took place at first in unstressed positions, but as early as 1200 it is found in stressed positions. Reduction to t in enclitic position (e.g. is't for is it) is equally early; in proclitic position (e.g. 'tis) it is common from XVI. The orig. g. and d. were HIS, HIM; the present g. is ITS. Hence ITSELF. OE. hit self; in XVII-XVIII sometimes written its self.

-ite ait suffix corr. to F. -ite and Sp., It. -ito, G. -it - L. -ita, -itēs - Gr. -itēs, forming adjs. and sbs. with the sense 'pert. to or connected with', 'member of', as in hoplitēs heavy-armed (soldier), HOPLITE, polítēs citizen (see POLITIC). There were many formations in Gr. on proper names, as Abderitēs, Staguritēs; in LXX and N.T. and later Christian use this type was widely extended for the names of sects, heresies, etc., and in late L. and the mod. langs. the suffix has been used without limit for 'follower, devotee, or admirer', as in Jacobite, Puseyite, Shelleyite, Wycliffite; these tend to be depreciatory and when used attrib. or as adj. have often the implication 'having the bad qualities of the respective leader or originator'. b. In scientific terminology, -ite is used after the type of Gr. -L. words in -itēs or -itis in names of fossils and minerals (see AMMONITE, ANTHRACITE, BELEMNITE, HEPATITE, TRILOBITE, on which many terms have been modelled, with an el. expressing a physical character, a locality, or the name of a discoverer, etc.). In chemistry, it is used in the names of certain organic compounds (e.g. glucoses), and in inorganic chem. is the termination of salts of acids denominated by adjs. in -ous, e.g. nitrite/nitrous. It forms also certain names of explosives, e.g. cordite, dynamite, lyddite, and of commercial products such as ebonite, vulcanite, xylonite.

Gr. -itis, prop. forming fems. of adjs. in -itēs, used to qualify nōsos disease, as arthritīs (disease) of the joints (ārthron), pleuritīs pleurisy (pleurā side, rib). On the analogy of these -itis came into use in mod. medical L. terminology for names of affections of particular parts, esp. of inflammatory disease, as APPENDICITIS, BRONCHITIS, MENINGITIS, TONSILLITIS. It has been extended in trivial use to the formation of sbs. descriptive of a state of mind or tendency regarded as a disease, e.g. suffragitīs (Asquith). The deriv. adjs. end in -itic i-tik.

Some L. adjs. were used sb., as captīvus, fugitiūus; of this usage there is a wide extension in mod. langs. and Eng. (adjective, explosive, missive, sedative). In early modEng. the suffix was freq. used with the force of -IBLE, esp. in adjs. of negative meaning, as in expressive, extensive, in- and unexpressive, inflexive, in suppressive. ¶ In hasty, jolly, tardy, the final f of the ME. forms hastyf, etc., fell away, leaving an ending identical with -y.

The two orig. uses of the Gr.

suffix remain in present usage with specialization in certain fields, viz. OE. -lic, ME. -lich, -lik, -li, corr. to OFris., OS., OHG. -lijk (Du. -lijk, G. -lich), ON. -ligr, -legr, Goth. -leiks. (The vowel was shortened in OE., ON., and G.; the Eng. forms in -li, -ly are due to ON.).

The orig. Germ. adjs. were comps. of **likam* appearance, form, body (cf. LYCHGATE and SUCH, WHICH), e.g. **frijōndlika*- friendly, having the appearance of a friend, **zōdōlika*-goodly, having the appearance or form of what is good, of good appearance. The most general senses in all Germ. langs. are 'having the qualities appropriate to', 'characteristic of', 'befitting'; -ly was added to sbs. of alien origin, as courtly, princely, scholarly; formations on designations of things are infrequent, as earthly, heavenly, leisurely, worldly. Deadly, likely, lively, lovely, mannerly, only, stilly are exceptional in form. A use common to Eng. with other Germ. langs. is to denote periodic occurrence, e.g. daily, yearly; such adjs. are based on the corr. advs.

When -ly is appended to adjs., the derivs. denote a quality allied or approximating to that expressed by the primary, e.g. OE. lēoflic (f. lēof LIEF) 'such as may seem dear', beloved, pleasing, lowly, kindly, poorly, sickly.

(As in -LY<sup>1</sup> the ME. forms -lī(e), -ly are due to ON.). In Germ. an adv. with this suffix no doubt orig. implied the existence of a corr. adj. in -LY<sup>2</sup>, but in OE. there are some advs. formed immed. on simple adjs., as bealdlice BOLDLY, swētlīce SWEETLY; and formations of this type increased greatly in ME. The general sense is 'in a manner characteristic of one who or a thing that is so-and-so' (as defined by the simplex), hence, 'in a so-and-so fashion', 'to a so-and-so degree'. Adverbs referring to moments or periods of time, such as annually, formerly, instantly, lately, latterly, quarterly, shortly, yearly, were prob. based at first on early; firstly, secondly, etc., were modelled on F. premierement, L. primo, etc.; formations on sbs. such as namely, partly are prob. based on L. nominatim, partim; accordingly, mostly, purposely are also particular instances; formations on pps., such as admittedly, allegedly, meaning 'as is admitted, alleged', have become latterly frequent.

Peculiarities of spelling and pronunciation are exemplified by the following: able, ably, simple, simply; idly (†idley); whole, wholly; solely, vilely; fully fu·li; dully dɑ·l(i)j, coolly kũ·li, fouly fau·li; merry, merrily; dryly, drily; shyly, grayly; true, truly; frantically, publicly (but heroically, poetically).
